

The Lukely Brook - Flooding

The Lukely Brook is a tributary of the River Medina and has its source in the Island's central chalk ridge.

The discharge from the Lukely Brook increases dramatically when the water table rises as the chalk aquifer fills after prolonged rain. Less than half a mile from the source, residents were taking the precaution of placing sand bags while the river was in spate.

